 - Clarification on what "personal" means: dating, financial, housing, intrapersonal relationships
 - What is the expectation for staff to be available to students for these personal concerns?
 - Depends on position – people who work with students are more likely to be expected. However, boundaries are important. Making it clear about what is and is not appropriate to bring up to staff/faculty (housing issues – probably, fighting with your friends – probably not)

- Trainings will be offered on websites and social media accessibility.
- Meeting January 14, 2026
 - Campus Signage (Private/Reserved Areas)
 - Dominique recently sent out an email explaining the new signage available.
 - Sanctuary Status (updates)
 - WOU has been compiling information to be readily available in terms of know your rights in relations to Sanctuary status. However, there is not a lot of consensus on what individual departments are or should be doing to provide that information.
 - Students wanted to promote WOU as a “sanctuary campus”. However, that could not be approved by senior leadership because WOU must comply with federal laws and regulations, but we also must comply with Oregon’s laws and regulations as a sanctuary state. Claiming ourselves as a “sanctuary campus” would do so in name only. There would be no regulation changes, and it could in fact attract undue and unwanted scrutiny. However, the university administration supports our students and staff and will do our best to provide as much information as possible. They continue to put together resources for students and staff and a video of “Know Your Rights” will be available soon.
